rejste til Rendsborg, hvor han særlig med iver studerede den civile bygningskunst.

Han brændte af længsel efter at komme til udlandet, og for at få rejsepenge af kongen udførte han nøjagtige tegninger af Rendsborg fæstning, kirker og huse og senere en model til en hængebro, kongen kunne lide hans arbejde, og efter at have overdraget Thura og hans ven løjtnant Holger Rosenkrantz forskellige opmålings- og tegnearbejder som de udførte til hand tilfredshed, bevilgede han Thura 400 Rdl. foruden hans løn.

I 1729 rejste vennerne til udlandet, hvor de besøgte en del tyske byer, bl. a. Kassel, og hvor de gjorde grundige studier og opmålinger. Efter sin hjemkomst blev Thura i 1732 overkonduktør og i 1733 hofbygmester samt forfremmedes samme år til ingeniørkaptajn, 1736 blev han oberstløjtnant. I 1740 blev han adlet under navnet de Thura. I 1744 blev han oberst og efter hans afsked i 1753 blev han generalmajor. I 1754 blev han generalbygmester.

Thura stod på højden af sin tids arkitektoniske og tekniske viden. Han var selv lært arkitekt som lærte hvad han kunne på sine rejser i udlandet. Hans stil var senbarok, som var populær på hans tid, men efterhånden blev det trængt af rokoko stilen.

Han spillede en betydelig rolle i dansk byggekunst, blandt andet: Christiansborg Slots indre udstyrelse, Det kongelige palæ i Roskilde, Hirschholm Slot, Erimitateslottet, Frederiksberg Slot, Spirene på Vor Frue og Vor Frelser Kirker samt mange andre fine bygninger rundt om i landet. The list is long.

Han byggede også bygningen som senere blev "Fødselsstiftelsen", den blev bygget som privatbolig og var Thura's eget hus fra 1757. Fra 1782 blev bygningen "Den Kongelige Fødselsstiftelse".

On October 14, 1740 Laurids de Thura and his brother Diderik de Thura were raised to the peerage (Adlet, blevet optaget i Adelsstanden).

Laurids de Thura, Anna Rosenørn and Christiane Marie Kiær de Kiærskiold each had their own coat of armor.

Laurids de Thura married Anna Rosenørn on Oct. 19, 1740, she was a daughter of Major General Poul Rosenørn and Mette Benzon. After his first wife passed away, he married again. On January 16, 1750 he married Christiane Marie de Kiærskiold, a daughter of "Justitsraad" Frederik Kiær de Kiærskiold and Inger (born) Pop.

Inger was a widow after Henrik Rantzau, who had owned Børglum Kloster. When Inger (now) de Kiærskiold passed away, Børglum Kloster went to Laurids de Thura.

Laurids de Thura passed away in the night between September 5 and 6, 1759. He was buried under the floor in Trinitatis Church in Copenhagen on Sept. 13, 1759.
